

ABSTRACT

The invention relates processes for producing enzyme containing granules having an enzyme containing core and a shell coating the core wherein the preparation of the core and application
5 of the shell are independent and are physically separated by time and/or location.